MAD DOG AND HENS CAUSE ALARM

Residents of South Hampton Engaged in Hunt for Animal.

A special to the Boston Post from South Hampton says that hundreds of hens dashing madly about, exhibiting intense dread of water and other well known symptoms of hydrophobia, are terrifying the people of the surrounding towns, and by the dread they inspire, seriously interfering with the hunt for the mad dog which is responsible for their condition.
The selectmen have called forth in pursuit of the dog, armed to the teeth with weapons of the village of the rebellion era, which they happen to have handy; but the constant necessity of dodging the raids of rabid roosters which burst out upon them from every farmyard where the foam-flecked hound had shown its trail of germs made famous by Pasteur, interfered seriously with the progress of the pursuit.
From Amesbury, Mass., where the dog wearing a Woburn Dremse, started on his mad career to his disappearance to the north of this town was afternoon, his path was marked by a line of slightly bitten hens, which seemed to go crazy as soon as the dog had snatched at them, and went about pecking at their unhurt fellows, or at other animals and people.
The dog stopped off on his wild dash to raid every chicken yard he passed. Many hens he killed by a single bite, others, to the number of hundreds, he merely caught by the wing or otherwise slightly injured.
The dog started inflicting his mania on the staid poultry of this region at the farm of James E. Watkins, the prominent Amesbury contractor.
George Christopher of Ferns avenue, tried to catch the animal. The infuriated creature sprang at his face, biting his nose and cheeks. Christopher will be given the pasture treatment in an effort to save him from the sad fate of the distracted chickens.
When the dog escaped over the New Hampshire line a Massachusetts posse of farmers which had been hastily formed, gave over pursuit of the canny and turned their attention to suppressing the poultry.
Among the farms visited by the dog, where the bitten hens showed signs of having contracted its mania were those of E. W. Paige, Mrs. Stickney and Mr. Burr.

COLORED MAN CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED HOLDUP

Arrest of Isaac Evans Following Revolver Shots from Officer Caused Considerable Excitement.

There was considerable excitement created on Daniel and Market streets shortly after ten o'clock, when four revolver shots fired at a fleeing man, caused a great crowd to gather. The shots were fired by Officer Condon to stop Isaac Evans, (colored), who was accused of an attempt to hold up a sailor named Ballard. A. Ledgewood from the U. S. S. Southern.
The story of the affair as told by Ledgewood, was that he with another sailor, Lewis B. Kirby were in a lunch cart with Isaac Evans, and Evans left before they did. Ledgewood and Kirby started down Market street to go over to the navy yard, when they met Evans, who they claimed, held Ledgewood up and demanded his money. Ledgewood swung on Evans and knocked him down and then they started for the police station.
Near the station they met officer Condon and they stated that a colored man had held him up and with the officer they went back up Daniel street and Ledgewood pointed out Evans who was standing on the corner.

EVERHARDT DEFEATED DRYDEN IN GREAT MATCH

Bill Dryden met his match on Monday evening at Freeman's hall, in last Everhardt of Tennessee, without any exception the best man of his weight ever seen in this city. A master of the wrestling game and in the condition he defeated Dryden in two out of three falls, before one of the largest crowds of the season.

Everhardt has a little on Dryden in weight, variously estimated from five to fifteen pounds, the former nearer right, and this backed up with a wonderful knowledge of the game, gave him an advantage, which the wonderful strength and endurance of Dryden could not overcome. The loss of the match is no discredit to Dryden, who put up a wonderful game battle, but he simply had to give way to a heavier and more experienced wrestler, although it looked after the second fall, as though he might win.

The first fall went to Everhardt in 8 minutes in a full body and arm bar.

Dryden slipping into the hold rather carelessly. The second fall went to Dryden in 1 hour, 1 minute, 20 seconds after as hard a fought match as has been seen here. Dryden went in to the out Everhardt and he did this in perfection, keeping away from him and once he was showing signs of distress, going after him hard, and he finally landed him with a full body and arm bar. A few seconds before that Everhardt had broken out of a body scissors and an arm bar, which looked good for a fall, and the execution was too much for him and he was tired and went under.

Both men were showing the effects of the hard work, and Dryden was in distress between falls. Back on the mat, it was evident that Everhardt had to get his man quick to win, and he went after him hard, and for ten minutes it was any man's battle, but the skill of Everhardt prevailed and he slipped over a body hold and arm bar, which was good for a fall.

DORR PAYS THE PENALTY THIS MORNING

Dies in the Electric Chair for the Murder of George E.
Marsh of Lynn.

Boston, March 24.—William A. Dorr was executed in the electric chair in the Charlestown state prison early today for the murder of George E. Marsh of Lynn, a retired soap manufacturer. The current was first applied at 12:07, 25. Dorr was officially declared dead at 12:12:40.

Dorr entered the execution chamber at 12:05:52, unaccompanied and unopposed. He was preceded by his spiritual adviser, Rev. Arthur E. Harrison, who was reading from Luke 23:46.

Dorr waved his hand to those of the witnesses he knew and was repeating "O Lord, into thy hands I commend my spirit," when the current of 1920 volts and seven and eight amperes was applied.

Mr. Barney, his attorney, said last night that Dorr was desirous to express in public what he has privately expressed to members of the Marsh family, his very sincere remorse for the death of Mr. Marsh and deep sympathy for his family "Dorr" said Mr. Barney "never defamed Marsh, but had always spoken of him in the highest terms."

All this was the attorney said "that the finding of limited responsibility in this case can be urged as a powerful reason for the future abolition of the death penalty in an enlightened state."

The prison officials said that Dorr had been eating heartily since he was placed in the death cell a week ago, suffered today from acute indigestion but during the evening he fell into a sound sleep.

Letters were received by the prisoner today from his mother and a sister in Maine. A telegram from an aunt in Berkeley, California, said: "I wish that any end were to be as painless as yours."

"In a letter to his mother Dorr sent messages to each member of his family."

The witnesses at the execution were former Mayor Charles N. Barney of Lynn, Dorr's counsel; R. H. Walker, Sheriff-elect of the state prison at Winsted, Vt.; Surgeon General Frank P. Williams; Dr. Joseph A. McLaughlin, the prison physician; Dr. George Magrath, the medical examiner; Rev. Arthur E. Harrison of Lynn, Dorr's spiritual adviser; Rev. Father M. J. Murphy, who was present by request of Warden Bridges; General B. F. Bridges, the warden; Nathaniel D. Allen, Deputy Warden; Deputy Sheriff Frank E. Welch; and a newspaper representative.

ORDER TROOPS OUT TO QUELL BUFFALO RIOT

Four Men Shot as Result of Labor Troubles
in New York.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 23.—The 7th regiment was ordered out for strike duty tonight following two serious riots at the plant of the Gould Paper company within the last twenty-four hours. One company was sent to Depew at midnight for guard duty.

The riotous scenes today which resulted in the shooting of four men, one of them fatally and the injury of many others were the first serious disturbances since the strike began at the Depew shops eight weeks ago.

Up to a late hour tonight Sheriff E. C. Becker hoped to be able to handle the situation with his deputies, but when word came of the second shooting affray which resulted in the wounding, special deputy attorney Frederick C. Slee for the company made a formal demand on the sheriff for military protection.

It was stated tonight that the lawless element at Depew had received a large shipment of arms today and that an attempt would be made to get possession of the guns and ammunition tomorrow.

Stanislaus Skotonski, claimed by his friends to be an innocent bystander, was shot in the head during the first and most serious trouble today, when a mob of 200 men held up a train bearing workmen to the plant and fought a half-hour pitched battle with the deputies. He died at the hospital tonight.

The first outbreak occurred today when a Lackawanna train bearing 800 workmen was within a mile of the plant early in the day. A mob of about 250 threw obstructions on the rails, and when the train came to a standstill poured revolver shots and stones into the windows of the coaches.

Half a dozen special deputies returned the fire, and it is claimed that several of the mob were hit and at once carried away by others in the crowd. The men in the train were ordered to lie flat on the floor and all who did so escaped injury.

Word was sent to Under Sheriff Andrew Kiek who had charge of twenty men at Depew and to Sheriff Becker's office at the Buffalo city hall. Sheriff Becker started three deputies on a light engine to overtake the work train.

The reinforcements from Depew and Buffalo arrived at the same time. The shooting had then been going on about twenty minutes, the mob firing from behind trees and buildings, and the train.

BENTON NOT SHOT BUT STABBED

Washington, March 23.—British Consul Percival's official report on the killing of William S. Benton, a Scotsman, at Juarez, reported at the embassy here today, says: "No pistol shots were fired in the fight which ended in the ranchman's death," leaving the inference that he was stabbed.

Consul Percival's report was the result of his investigation conducted at the order of Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador. It does not make any definite charge about the manner of Benton's death, further than to establish that it was not by shooting, as was first said by Villa, who alleged that Benton had been executed by a firing squad, after court martial.

The broad inference that Benton was stabbed is regarded as especially significant in connection with other information here, that the Constitutional commission, which investigated the affair has found that Benton was stabbed by one of Villa's officers, who is expected to be tried for the crime.

Consul Percival's report also states that Benton was to Villa unarmed and to protest against the theft of his cattle, and that finding agrees with the contention of Benton's friends.

Brig. Gen. Bliss, commanding the border forces, reported today that in expectation of a battle below Guerrero Mex., opposite Zepeda, Tex., a detachment of Troup L, 14th Cavalry, had been dispatched from Fort McIntosh to Zapata.

Rear Admiral Fletcher reported conditions in Vera Cruz and Tampico unchanged. See, Bryan said he had no information of the nature of the conferences in which Mr. O'Sullivan had participated in Vera Cruz.

ELABORATE DEFENSES

Torreon Protected by Fortifications Built in Most Approved Method—Barbed Wire Entanglements.

Empejillo, Mex. March 23.—Officers from the extreme front returned today after viewing some of the Federal fortifications through field glasses. They reported that the defenses are elaborate and laid out according to the latest approved methods so that troops may move from trench to trench without exposing themselves.

Fresh earth is said to mark the lurking places of the Federal big guns. Some of the barbed wire entanglements were visible.

Troops continued to pour into Bermejillo from the north today. Nearly all of the supplies from Yermo are now here.

BATTLE FOR NORTHEAST

It Is Expected Soon Near Guerrero, Mex., by Forces at Matamoros and Nuevo Laredo.

Brownsville, Tex., March 23.—Important developments in the Mexican revolution in Northeast Mexico were forecasted last night in troop movements in preparation for an impending battle on the border, which is expected to be fought within the next few days. It was said the engagement would be likely to result in the taking of Nuevo Laredo by the Constitutionalists or the capture of Matamoros by the Federals.

All the field rebel officers left Matamoros for the front yesterday, only Gen. Pablo Gonzales and a few members of his immediate staff remaining in charge of a small garrison. The battle is expected to be fought between Guerrero and Mier, both border points.

Guerrero is occupied by Gen. Guardiola's Federal Army of 1500, sent from Nuevo Laredo, while the Constitutionalists have been ordered to concentrate at Mier to resist Guardiola's advance toward Matamoros. Gen. Jesus Carranza, brother of the rebel chief, commands the rebels.

To assist Carranza, Gen. Antonio Villarreal, with 1500 men from Matamoros station, 50 miles east of Monterrey, has started northward to intercept a possible retreat by Guardiola to Nueva Laredo. Reinforcements for Carranza also have been ordered from the small bands operating along the Mexican National Railway.

Should Guardiola be defeated, it was pointed out last night, capture of Nuevo Laredo, opposite Laredo, Tex., would be almost certain while Carranza's force, scattered, would leave Matamoros, opposite Brownsville, unprotected.

Skirmishes already have been reported between the advance guards of the opposing forces, but have not been confirmed in Matamoros. Guardiola occupied Guerrero, after dislodging the rebels from San Ygnacio.

Gen. Villarreal has six cannon and Gen. Carranza two cannon and several machine guns. Guardiola also has artillery.

Col. Alberto Fuentes, chief of staff of Gen. Gonzales, yesterday said every man of the Constitutional force had been supplied with new arms since the United States embargo had been raised.

NAVAL NOTES

To Find Out What He Meant Counsel for Lieut. Commander Charles P. Huff who was recently found guilty by a court martial at Norfolk, Va., for assaulting an officer of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company, will be asked by Mr. Daniels what was meant by the reference to the $3000 a day which that shipbuilding company was losing as a result of Mr. Huff's vigilance in protecting the interests of the government. It was intimated at the trial that this fact might be responsible for the difficulties which Lieut. Commander Huff got into. However, no direct statement was made and the matter did not appear in the testimony.

Fullam, superintendent of the academy, will command the fleet, which will be composed of the Missouri, flag ship; the Idaho and the Illinois. Members of the three upper classes will go on the cruise.

ROAD CONVENTION
A GREAT SUCCESS

The New Hampshire Road Convention has been a success unequaled in the history of the Good Roads movement in this state. Not only from a standpoint of attendance was the convention a success, but what is more vital, from a standpoint of enthusiasm. The creation of this enthusiasm is the object of every convention but never before has it been so thoroughly realized in New Hampshire.

The educational value of the convention was perfection itself. The lectures were given by the highest authorities on the subjects presented, and were given in such a manner that their interpretation could not be doubted. Although all the points brought out would not appeal to every one, each speaker gave at least one new idea, which was carried away in the minds of each one present, and an interest was instilled which will be of incalculable value to our roads in New Hampshire. Mr. Gates, of Vermont, threw down the gauntlet to us when he made the statement that Vermont was going to endeavor to beat New Hampshire in the character of the gravel roads built this coming year. This statement will give birth to a rivalry between the two states which will be of great benefit to both.

The machinery exhibit far exceeded the expectancy of all who attended. Every exhibitor claimed that it was the largest exhibit ever given at a road convention in New England. The educational value of this exhibit is on a par with the lectures; giving the Selectmen and Road Agents an opportunity to see the very latest in road machinery and new methods of construction.

DISCHARGE COMING AT BOSTON YARD

Washington, March 23.—Efforts by Massachusetts Congressmen to prevent the discharge of 100 mechanics from the Charlesown navy yard on Wednesday failed entirely this morning. The Navy Department announced that it could find no work for these men.

Telegrams protesting against the wholesale discharge were received by several members of the Massachusetts delegation and the subject was taken up at once by Representative Murray. Mr. Murray proposed to Chief R. S. Griffin of the Bureau of Steam Engineering that these men should be employed on "standard work" on the new supply ship and arranged that their expenditure would prove of value later in the construction of this vessel.

LITTLE JOBS FOR FATHER

It's A Shame to Print This Suggestion for Mother.

It is a well known fact that little things get done with less friction in some homes than in others. This is particularly the case when the man of the house is expected to do some little job. But he is not always approached in a manner that is conducive to the best accomplishment of the work. Most men dislike to have extra tasks "sprung" on them. It is a masculine habit to enjoy thinking over a matter—how it could be done best, etc., whereas, a woman enjoys acting upon impulse, even if she only uses pins to produce a quick result.

Most husbands are willing to help their wives in any way they can. Some never need prodding, but go about themselves, doing this or that, or "thinking up" various things to do to improve their place or to lighten the housework. But there are many other busy men who have but little time to "tinker about," and in order to use their spare time to the best effect their wives ought to have ready a list of jobs to be done whenever they are ready to do them.

It is rather a satisfaction to a man than otherwise to dispose of a lot of odd jobs at one fell swoop on some rainy Saturday afternoon, or when he has unexpected leisure. A memorandum pad and a pencil kept in a handy place will well repay the woman who wants things done about the house that are beyond her province or powers.

She should jot down as she thinks of the things that require attention: The loose hinge on the cellar door; a doorknob that needs a few nails; something that requires gluing, etc. There is always something to be done, and it is safe to say it will be done sooner and better if the man knows that such a list is waiting for him.

Look about you, housekeepers in whom this advice is given, because next Saturday may be that rainy day when there would be time for doing a dozen little things if they were listed. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

COURTING SPANISH STYLE

Hardly Sort that Will Appeal to Ardent American Lovers

When he is admitted within, his doom is sealed, if that is a proper expression in connection with a senorita of ravishing eye and hair. Once he has become a visitor inside the great fort like doors he is expected to declare his intention and to stick to it. Even then there are no more sentimental rhapsodies for him and his senorita under the palms of the Palio; there are no whispered conversations full of sweet maudlin monologues.

He sits in a rocking chair that is one of a painfully straight row, ranged down the middle of the room. His senorita sits in one in a similarly straight row opposite. The rest of the row is occupied by the senior father and the senior mother and the senior aunts and the senoritas sisters and all the rest of the household. For an hour or two they rock at each other and speak noble platitudes.

That the senior father begins to indicate very much as senior fathers sometimes do in the United States that he would by the parental head on the pillow. The senior lover picks his hat from the stone floor and rises. The senorita sweetens smiles sweetly at him over her fan. The senior father and the senior mother say graciously:

"Adios, Don Enrique says." "Much thanks. It is hoped that one may have the pleasure extreme of arriving again some evening." "Some evening" is the next evening in the same rocking chair.—Century Magazine.

ORGANIZED CANAL
FORCE TO SAVE WAGES

Washington, March 23.—Organization of the mechanical forces in the Panama Canal Zone to resist reductions in the present rate of pay have been brought to the attention of the officials here. It was said at the Canal Commission offices, however, that there is no danger of interference with the completion of the canal because a provision in the United States Deficiency Appropriation bill continued the present rate of pay until the waterway is finished.

While the canal may be opened to commercial traffic, under certain conditions, within three months, a great deal of work will remain to be done before the canal can be said to be actually finished.

The new Panama Canal act, providing that employees in the Zone may be paid not to exceed 25 per cent more than the wages current in the United States. It is estimated the present scale is from 40 to 50 per cent higher than in this country.

LABOR LAW UPHELD
BY SUPREME COURT

Washington, March 23.—The 10-hour woman's labor law of Massachusetts was upheld as constitutional today by the Supreme Court.

In 1909 Massachusetts passed a law limiting the hours of minors and women in manufacturing and mechanical establishments to 56 hours a week, and 10 hours a day with certain qualifications. The state in 1911 reduced the hours from 56 to 54, but the latter law was not in question in the case decided today.

Richard C. Riley, superintendent of the Lowell Mills charged with employing women contrary to the statute, attacked its constitutionality. The Michigan local option law of 1909 was also upheld as constitutional by the Supreme Court.

A Favorite Bugaboo.

The favorite bugaboo of a certain school of alarmists is that the population of the country is increasing faster than the food supply, and that consequently the time is coming when there will be trouble in getting enough for everybody to eat. The figures put forth by these disturbing statisticians, backed by high prices of food stuffs not due to scarcity, are well calculated to alarm the unthinking and give rise to the belief that there is serious trouble ahead.

People who stop to reflect upon the vast areas of untilled land, and the fact that most of the soil under cultivation is capable of producing much more than it does, refused to be swept from their feet by figures and fables tending to show that the greatest and richest agricultural country in the world is steadily gravitating toward starvation.

And the faith of these believers in God and man and Mother Earth may well be strengthened by a report of the committee of statistics and standards of the chamber of commerce of the United States. This report, recently published, flatly refutes the claim that population is increasing faster than the food supply in reality, though admitting that figures can be manipulated in a way to make it appear that such is the case. The report says the alarmists have adopted the old Malthusian doctrine, which "sought to show that the food supply of the world increases only in arithmetical progression, while population grows in geometric progression, so that hunger, self-denial and poverty are the inevitable portion of the greater part of the human race." Of that doctrine the committee says: "This proposition is entirely unanswerable on paper, but is principally remarkable for not being so, since it is contrary to all human experience."

There is no occasion for worry over a possible lack of food in this vast country of diversified climates and soils. The only shortages ever experienced are due to the partial failure of certain crops, caused not by inadequate acreage or tillage, but by conditions beyond human control. The fact that prices are high has nothing to do with the case. There is food enough for all, and there always will be.

An exchange says: "The vote in the United States Senate on a woman suffrage amendment to the constitution was a victory for woman suffrage as a principle, but an overwhelming defeat for woman suffrage as a political program." Which reminds one of the individual who years ago calmly remarked that he was in favor of a certain law, but "agin" its enforcement.

The shouting about unemployment will soon cease except on the part of those with whom shouting is a profession. In a few weeks the demand for labor in many fields will be greater than the supply, yet the conditions will not be such as to enable workers to dictate absolutely the kind of work they shall do, the hours they shall work and the wages to be paid.

That moving picture people are strictly up to the minute was shown in New Jersey the other day, when the plant of a company that makes moving pictures burned down. But the company had its photographer on the spot and a 900-foot reel photograph was made, so in due time the patrons of the "movies" will have a chance to see the fire.

T. G. MacCauley, holder of the American altitude record, criticizes the practice of sending military aviators into the air in machines which he terms "man-killers." Mr. MacCauley would confer a public favor by kindly mentioning a flying machine that doesn't come under that classification.

It is safe to assume that the snow-shoveling season is over except in the rural districts, where in many places the sleigh roads will have to be cut to a width sufficient for wagons. The "snow hills" of the past winter will be large in city and country.

President Wilson admits that he likes detective stories, but it is not probable that this is the sole reason for his interest in the manner of the deaths of Mr. Benton and other foreigners in Mexico.

The American Society for Thrift offers prizes to school children for the encouragement of thrift. That may be all right, but the greatest prizes for thrift are bestowed directly by thrift itself.

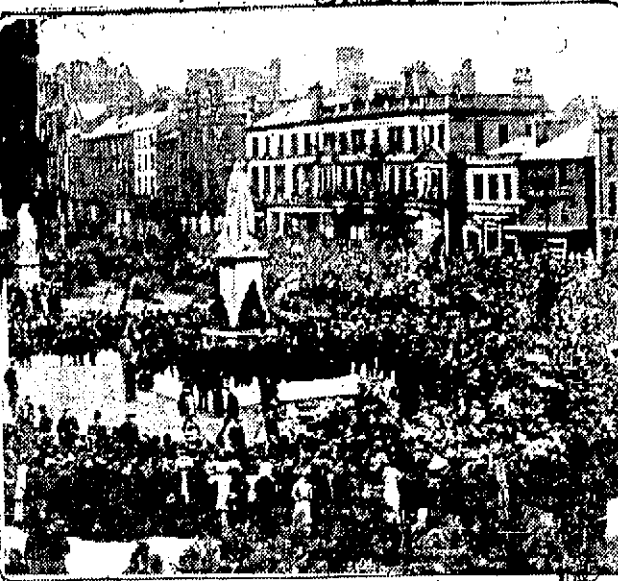

According to an old and cherished weather sign, we are in for a late spring. The wind was in the wrong direction on the day the sun "crossed the line."

The fact that the President's daughter is engaged to Secretary McAdoo is no reason why the people should make ado.

Publishing articles objectionable to the wives of French ministers appears to be more dangerous than French dueling.

Anti-Home Rule Demonstration In Belfast; Ulster Signal Corps.

Photos by American Press Association.

Belfast, the capital of the province of Ulster, in the north of Ireland, was the scene of the anti-home rule demonstration which followed the rejection of the Ulster Unionist compromise on the home rule bill by the Ulster Unionists. The city quaked with excitement. The strengthening of the British garrisons in that part of Ireland did not lessen the fiery feeling. Upper picture shows a typical anti-home rule demonstration in Belfast, and lower view shows signal corps of Ulster volunteers.

GOOD WEIGHT, MARM.

Under the heading "On the Wing," the Concord Monitor prints the following relative to the late Frank Jones:

ing relative to the late Frank Jones:

"When Frank Jones started out as a Yankee linotype peddler, I think at a time when he was not out of his teens, he made up his mind that it was a good business policy to get the absolute confidence of all the farmers' wives throughout the region in Maine, New Hampshire, and North-western Massachusetts through which, two or three times a year, he drove his peddler's wagon.

"He wanted to put in a few words exactly what that principle was. He thought a good deal about it and at last one day he went to a sign painter and asked him to paint upon each side of the wagon three words in big letters. Those words contained the basic principle of Frank Jones's business career, and they were firmly believed in by all the farmers' wives of whom he bought rags and scrap metal. The words were these:

WOULD LIMIT HARVARD MEN'S POCKET MONEY

Hollis Also Favors Weekly
Drills—College Lags
Behind, He Says.

"I am quite sure that Harvard college is not representative of the United States—nor of New England. She is too conservative too high bound. She lags behind the times. She does not lead; she follows."

Thus did a Harvard man, Senator Henry P. Hollis of New Hampshire of the class of 1892 assail Harvard in an address delivered last night in the Harvard Union before the undergraduates of the college.

Harvard college and other eastern colleges he declared, neglected to interest themselves in matters of public policy, and at the best act the part of a conservative old man in politics. The social life of the colleges he assailed too, declaring that among even the students "we feel the chill of convention" and that the man in the buggy suit with the country haircut was in the background during his college course. The result of this, he said, was that our college represented "a very thin upper crust of our Great American life."

"For the salvation of the colleges," Senator Hollis advised the declining of gifts from men of great wealth, increasing the tuition fees, eliminating elaborate dormitories, and other forms of "show," and establishing military drills.

"I was graduated at Harvard in 1892," began Senator Hollis. "That fall I gave my enthusiastic support to Grover Cleveland. I was a thorough-going conservative Democrat."

"In 1896 I voted the Democratic ticket reluctantly. I was a snob. I thought I was a good deal better than my party. I hoped it would return again to safety and sanity."

"In 1900 I first heard William Jennings Bryan. I became an immediate convert to his radical democracy and ever since I have been his ardent admirer and disciple. I entered politics, ran for congress in 1900, ran for Governor of New Hampshire in 1902 and 1904, and in 1913 was elected to the only office I have ever held, as Senator of the United States."

"I believe I am the first Harvard man of radical views to occupy a seat in the senate. The only other Harvard men there at present are Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. Communist would be undignified; it is superfluous."

"In the middle west the bond between some states and their leading universities is very close. The state legislatures submit questions of public policy to the college faculties and receive opinions which largely control their action. This is particularly the case in Wisconsin. Imagine, if you please, the Legislature of Massachusetts requesting an opinion from the faculty of Harvard College. Imagine the reception it would get on Beacon hill if it should find its way there."

"It is a great pity that the political arm of our state and the national government should not receive support from our colleges. Our leading college professors look on politics as a low pursuit a nasty business. Our leading legislators regard college opinion as a joke. Both these attitudes are very real. They are equally mistaken."

"There is a firm belief among public men that the President of the United States was forced from the presidency of a leading eastern college because he tried to stem the tide of snobbery and make the college democratic in the social, not the political sense."

"College life should be made less expensive, more simple; it should be standardized. No more elaborate dormitories should be built."

"Class elections should be by Australian ballot, preceded by primaries, and only men of high scholarship should be eligible to office. I should impose a limit on each man's allowance. If this did not suit the very rich he could easily find a college where he would be welcome."

"But most important of all college men should be taught what is wrong with the world and the way to see it right; what poverty is and where it exists; what makes it and what will prevent it; what injustice is, its causes and its remedies; the reason for high cost of living and the way to

WORTH KNOWING.

Two thousand nine hundred silkworms are required to produce one pound of silk; but it takes twenty-seven thousand spiders to produce one pound of web.

Spiders have four pairs for spinning their threads, each pair having one thousand holes, and the fine web itself is the union of four thousand threads. No spider spins more than four webs, and when the fourth is destroyed they seize on the webs of others.

CURRENT OPINION

New Woman, an Interesting
Problem, Sets Pace for Modern Dramatist.

The modern dramatist is struggling to keep up to the woman, who is as much a problem to him as she perhaps is to her husband. The character of the woman has so tremendously changed and the process of readjustment is difficult—all around.

In the old fashioned ideal she was simply a mute, inglorious bearer of dishes and children, a sentimentally submissive figure, whose sum of existence was rounded by the condition of the bed linen and the number of buttons on her husband's shirts. Life for her was sentiment diversified by an orderly kitchen. She was subject to certain immutable rules. It was her law, for instance, to accept age when it came. She was a secluded being, who was immolated upon the altar of her family.

And that tremendous change through which she has passed makes her infinitely the most interesting problem with which the dramatist has to deal. She has passed through one of the most interesting revolutions the world has ever seen—a revolution quite as interesting as that of France and possibly even more far-reaching in its consequences.

For the first time in all the ages woman is finding her own individuality. For the first time she is becoming a separate factor in civilized life, with separate ideals of her own. And in this respect she is illustrating her tremendous potential importance to society.—Alfred Sutro, English Dramatist.

REINDEER IN ALASKA

Officials of the Alaska Division, Bureau of Education, today gave emphatic denial to a recently published statement that the reindeer in Alaska are "deteriorating and diminishing." They declare that, on the contrary, the Alaskan reindeer are constantly increasing in number and that there has been no deterioration.

The recently completed tabulation of the returns contained in the annual reports of the superintendents of the herds shows that there were, June 30, 1913, 47,266 reindeer in the 62 Alaskan herds, or a net increase of 23 per cent during the fiscal year. This is considered a fair rate of increase, especially since nearly 5,000 reindeer were killed for food and skins during the year. Only 3,553 of the reindeer are owned by the Government; 5,047 are owned by missions; 7,834 by Lapps; and the remaining 30,832 are owned by 797 Eskimos and Indians, whose income from the reindeer industry during the fiscal year was $66,956. The reindeer belonging to these natives have an estimated value of $623,300. The Government is planning to go out of the reindeer business as fast as it can train natives for individual ownership, the policy being to encourage independence and initiative among the native population. Disposition of reindeer is in charge of the United States school teachers, and it is expected that the Government will dispose of all its reindeer within the next four years.

In discussing the statement that the Alaskan reindeer are growing smaller because of inbreeding, Mr. W. T. Lopp, Chief of the Alaska Division, maintains that the reindeer now in Alaska are larger animals than those which comprised the original stock imported from Siberia. Mr. Lopp states: "Alaska affords a better range than Siberia. The climate is better. The herds average more than 700 reindeer each, so that the danger of inbreeding can not be serious. Necessarily there is more inbreeding among the scattered bands of wild caribou. On the other hand, since the caribou are larger than the reindeer, their mixture with a number of our reindeer herds seems to have improved the size. At the same time it has been noticed that the introduction of wild blood makes herding more difficult."

"Pasture is good in most parts of western and northern Alaska, but a few reindeer herds are kept in the windswept regions along the north-west coast, where the winter moss frequently becomes coated with ice from alternate freezing and thawing. This prevents the herd from securing proper food, and results in undernourished deer. Mosquitoes are also a cause of stunted growth. Herds at some distance from the coast need to be kept well up on the mountain slopes to avoid the mosquito pests."

"The greatest immediate menace to the welfare of the reindeer lies in the tundra fires, started in the region of the mining camps. There is plenty of grass and foliage for the deer in summer, but in winter it is the tundra moss that furnishes forage, and to destroy it is to deal a body blow to one of Alaska's most promising industries."

Naples, March 23.—Reports are current today that Professor Giuseppe Mercalli, director of the Vesuvian observatory, supposed to have been burned to death on March 13, was murdered. No trace has been found of $400 he had in his possession, and it is believed thieves broke into his residence, took the money, strangled the professor, saturated the body with petroleum and then set fire to it to conceal the crime.

 "You seem to be unusually supplied with buttons of all kinds. Why, that looks like one that my husband had on his last winter's suit."
 "Indeed," said the minister's wife with a sigh. "Well, all the buttons were found in the contribution box, and I thought I might as well make some use of them. What—must you go? Well, goodbye. Come again soon."

Evans simply put on more speed and shot into Market street. There more shots were fired, but they had no effect on the fleeing man, who ran through Ladd street and he was overtaken near the National hotel and captured. He did not put up any fight when the officer caught him.

At the police station he denied having had anything to do with the matter, but was locked up. Ledgewood and Kirby were held as witnesses but later released to a Chief Master at Arms, who promised to have them present in court today.

LATIN ARGUMENT

Milanese Diners Show How Slight a Difference it Takes to Live Up a Quiet Little Party in Italy.

"There is something most refreshing to the colder northern races in the excitable and volatile Latin," said George Humlin. "We had a delightful exhibition of this quality when we first reached Milan. We entered a cafe, celebrated as much for the artists who frequent it as its excellent cuisine and had barely given our order when our attention was attracted to a nearby table, where two diners were engaged in what was evidently a very serious discussion.

"At that time our linguistic accomplishments were limited to Mark Twain's famous 'Quaint castle—Troppo caro,' with an additional phrase or two thrown in, all of which were inadequate to unravel any clue to the earnest conversation opposite.

"Presently the voices grew louder and more passionate, and the two men looked positively violent as they half rose from their seats and glared at each other ferociously across the table. We became decidedly uneasy. Venderas, sibilant and such Italian appurtenances are all picturesque enough in grand opera, but we did not care to have our dinner punctuated with deeds of carnage.

"In the meantime all the other diners had stopped eating and were gazing with interest toward the scene of altercation. Gradually they abandoned their dinners altogether and came over to take sides with the disputants. Even the waiters forsook their posts, and attached themselves to one side or the other. 'Surely, we thought anxiously, this quarrel must involve the honor of the whole nation.'

"By this time the din was fearful. A score or more of excited men were shouting at each other across the small table, brandishing furious fists in each other's faces and looking like bloodhounds and murder. Our soup cooled untasted before us; all appetite had vanished. We felt a desperate conviction that a massacre was in hand and our minutes were numbered.

"Finally, one of the crowd pounded on the table vigorously and yelled some noises which sounded like a pack of greaser's exclaiming. There was an instant's silence and then the whole lot of them, waiters and all, bolted out the front door.

"We breathed an immeasurable relief! At least the scene of slaughter was transferred and our skins were safe. Just then our waiter reluctantly returned, though he made it plain that his duty to us was a decided bore. 'Was it a feud?—a vendetta?' we asked—and can't the police stop them before they kill each other?"

"And the waiter replied in his own peculiar brand of English. 'It be onlee that they not agree which be the shortest road to La Scala, and so, half they go one way and half they go the other, to make it prove!'—San Francisco Argonaut.

REAL ATTACK COMMENCED

Fate of the Mexican Rebellion
Depends on Ultimate Result—Villa Says Torreon Must Crumble.

El Verjel, Durango, Mex., March 23.—The real attack on Torreon began early today when General Villa accepted Lerdo, virtually without resistance, and at one o'clock this afternoon began attack on Gomez Palacio.

The three towns are, virtually, one in a commercial and social sense and are connected by four miles of street railway but Torreon proper represents the military stronghold where the main Federal force is gathered under General Refugio Velasco.

Gomez Palacio and Lerdo are with-out important natural defenses and in previous revolutions have never been seriously defended. The real test of strength is expected to come soon when Villa hurls his force against the defenses of Torreon. On this battle, it is conceded, hinges the fate of the revolution.

The mountain Cerro de la Pila, lies to the right of the street car and railroad tracks, which connect Gomez with Torreon, and forms an advance portion of the Torreon defense.

General Villa telegraphed confidentially that he would take Gomez Palacio tonight. This confidence is based on the fact that the mountain is naturally defended merely for the purpose of indicating what damage is possible. Otherwise the position is such that the attacking force could be cut off by a superior enemy.

The advance on Gomez Palacio began from this point, which is only two or three miles from Gomez Palacio. The action was preceded by a furious cannonading directed at the federal battery with their infantry supports on the mountain slopes. When relief officers with field glasses observed that the federals were shifting their positions, their own infantry was set in motion across the plain in the direction of the mountain.

It is reported that other troops are approaching Torreon in other directions, for last week Villa drove in the federal outposts from all points of the compass and made the way clear for his own attack by taking Matamor, Del Rio Junction and a number of towns.

Once Gomez Palacio and the mountain La Pila is taken the rebel troops may move rapidly, follow the street car line until the very gates of the city are reached. The whole valley is reported to be in a state of defense with barbed wire entanglements and trenches; irrigation ditches in some instances have been flooded, while others left dry will shelter the Mexican soldiers; Federal batteries everywhere occupy the hills which close in on Torreon from all sides.

The preliminary skirmishing which enabled the rebels to bring their batteries into action this afternoon began at daybreak today and the federals fought stubbornly. They retired from trench to trench on the plain until driven back on the main force on the slopes of the mountain.

The rebels numbered 3000, with General Lorikio Ortega at their head and General Villa in the immediate background, Lerdo, where the largest shoe factories in Mexico are located, lies around a shoulder of Cerro de la Pila from Gomez Palacio. It was taken last night without material defense, as the main mountain batteries were planned to command the approaches to Gomez Palacio.

It was occupied by the combined forces of Generals Tomas, Urbina, Hernandez and Rodriguez.

The rebels went to the east of Gomez Palacio.

General Villa was in high spirits and predicted that Torreon proper would crumble before him.

KING EDWARD'S COURTESY

An article by Mr. Edward Leggs contains three notable instances of the flawless courtesy of King Edward VII. Many years before his accession, Mr. Leggs writes, drawing it is evident, from his own memory, the Prince was the Prime Minister's guest at dinner. Two Ambassadors were present, and among the party was one who, although he had not then occupied public attention had been honored with an invitation.

Conversation was as usual, carried on in a subdued but perfectly unstrained tone. After the meal no circle was formed as is the rule abroad, but the Prince approached the guests in turn and honored each one with a talk of a few minutes, during which the others continued to converse among themselves.

The evening passed quickly, and the Prince, going round the room, had reached the door, and was about to take his departure. He threw one last curious, sweeping glance round the room. Far away a solitary guest stood near the fireplace—the only person with whom the Prince had not conversed, or of whom he had not taken leave.

The man stood there, deep in thought, probably wondering if he could afford a cab to take him home. The Prince walked back to him, shook hands, and wished him a friendly "Good night."

"The King of the future may not have asked himself if his kindly thoughtfulness was appreciated," said ments Mr. Leggs, "but I have every reason to know that it was."

Again, it was in the early 70's; the scene, the office of the Morning Post. A young man was summoned to the editor's room.

"I wanted to see you," said Mr. Northwick, the Lord Chamberlain of later years. "I have brought you a message from Marlborough House. The Prince asked me to tell you that he and the Princess are much pleased at the way you do your work when you attend ceremonies at which they are present."

This was the Prince's kindly way of "doing a good turn" to a young "struggle-for-life."

At Baden in the old days the Prince used often to make purchases at a certain shop and have long chats with the manager. Two or three successful years the Prince had said:

"When you happen to be in London come and see me."

The time came when the tradesman was in London on business. Mustering up all his courage, he left his card at Marlborough House, although he did not expect to get any response. On the following day he received an invitation to spend three days at the Prince's country house at Sandringham. As he was shown into the drawing room the Prince came forward to greet him.

"My wife, the Princess," said the Prince, "my brother, the Duke of Edinburgh, my brother's wife."

And that tradesman's three days' visit at Sandringham perfectly fulfilled the promise of the Prince's simple hearty greeting.—Fortnightly Review.

TROOPS NOT TO BE USED AGAINST ULSTER

Matters Quiet and Government Trying for a Peaceful Solution of Trouble,

London, March 23. The interest in the disaffection in the Army arising out of the newest phase of the Home Rule situation was displayed in the House of Commons this afternoon, when the House was crowded to listen to a statement from Col. J. E. B. Seely, Secretary of State for War.

The communication was very brief and utterly vague. The gist of it was that some officers had informed Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, commander-in-chief in Ireland, that they could not serve in certain circumstances. There was, he said, a misunderstanding, and these officers had been ordered to rejoin their regiments. The movement of troops, he concluded, was solely in order to protect the stores of Government arms and ammunition.

Debate on Adjournment of House.

Both Premier Asquith and Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, recognized the widespread anxiety for an exhaustive debate on the subject by agreeing to a motion for the adjournment of the House immediately after the Secretary for War had spoken, in order to discuss the Irish situation.

Mr. Law declared that the Government's procedure was a most amazing instance of paltering with the House of Commons. The danger of the British Army being destroyed before the country's eyes had, he said, come on the Government like a bolt from the blue. He had, he declared, received word from other quarters apart from the cavalry regiments that resignations of officers had occurred.

Mr. Law then read a letter stating that officers who would not fight against the Ulster men would be dismissed from the service.

Mr. Law declared the action of the Government in moving troops was foolish, as there was no new situation in Ulster nor any threatened outbreak. "Country in a Blaze by Saturday."

The opposition leader read a letter in which Gen. Sir Arthur Paget had stated to the commanding officers of regiments that active operations were to begin against Ulster, and that it was expected the country would be ablaze by Saturday. The Irish commander-in-chief wrote that he was in close communication with the War Office and had received instructions from headquarters.

Mr. Law asserted: "It will be difficult for the Prime Minister to convince the House that, with or without his knowledge, some of his colleagues did not make these movements of troops as part of a concerted plan to provoke or intimidate Ulster."

Mr. Law asked whether Gen. Hubert Gough, commander of the 3d Cavalry Brigade at the Curragh, had been reinstated, and if so on what terms. He contended that officers refusing to undertake duty against Ulster should be permitted to resign instead of losing their pensions.

Nothing, Mr. Law declared, could save the army now but a clear declaration that officers of the navy and army would not be compelled to engage in civil war against their wish. He concluded:

"The Government is attempting to coerce a portion of the United Kingdom without the authority of the election."

Cheers greeted Premier Asquith when he rose to reply. He said that after Mr. Law's speech it was necessary that the country should know at once the kind of issue that was going to be presented.

"The duties of the army in relation to the civil power," the Premier said, "are very simple and have never been complicated. Any officer or private who refuses to obey an order is liable to dismissal."

As far back as December last year, said Mr. Asquith, general officers of the army were informed that it might be their duty to come to the assistance of the civil power, and any officer who had been in their area might be excused. If there had been any intention of an aggressive move toward Ulster, this would have been the last step taken, and, he added, the movements of troops were now concluded.

Paget Denied Using Such Words. The Premier said Sir Arthur Paget had emphatically denied that he had used any such words as "that this was the first step in a series of operations to conquer Ulster."

These words had been wrongly attributed to the commander-in-chief in Ireland. Gen. Paget had never received from the War Office any instructions justifying such a statement. It was said the Premier, an undoubted fact that Gen. Hubert Gough and other officers concerned had interpreted their instructions in a wider sense.

The Army Council, the Premier said, was now satisfied there had been a misunderstanding and the officers also were satisfied. He concluded:

"If the doctrine laid down by Mr. Law that any officer refusing to serve was only doing his duty was to be preached, the country was in presence of a new danger."

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Steps Itching Scalp

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp, or dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a baldness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knapp's Danderine from any drug store or office counter and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have an appearance of abundance. It is a luxury of the scalp and softens but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use when you will actually see a lot of fine downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

10 YEARS WITH NO TONGUE

But Thomas J. Maguire, Who Has Just Died, Was Able to Talk and Sing During That Time.

New York, March 23.—Thomas J. Maguire, aged 67, theatrical manager, who lived and talked and sang for 10 years, without a tongue, died yesterday of cancer.

It was Mr. Maguire's love for cigars that brought about the loss of his tongue. He smoked from 25 to 30 cigars almost every day for more than 20 years. Cancer of the tongue developed. One operation failed and in March, 1904, Mr. Maguire greeted his friends for what he believed was the last time, and submitted to the operation in which practically the whole tongue was removed. To the surprise of the surgeons the patient almost immediately after the operation showed signs of recovery.

Several months later Mr. Maguire discovered that his power of speech had not been destroyed. He often said that he found singing easier than talking. He was born in San Francisco.

TRADE INSURANCE

Advertising is trade insurance. It not only builds but conserves. It creates good will, makes enemies, and retains them. It reduces the cost of doing business by increasing the volume. It cuts the costs of making. It is possible to give greater advantage to the customers. It is to the advantage of the buyer to trade with an advertiser. It is because that concern is doing business with modern methods. Read over the advertising in today's Herald and it will be clear that the houses making their appeal for your patronage are the representative concerns of the community. Think of the businesses in the same line that do not advertise—that is, if you can remember their names—and then do a little mental comparison. It is not hard to see that the men who deserve your support are the men who are advertising and making good on their promises.

BIG INCREASE.
Telephone Co. Has 2690 Stations Connected With Local Exchange.

According to the official records of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, Portsmouth shows a development in the telephone service that compares with any city of its size in the New England states.

This city in February, last, had 2,690 total stations, serving a population of 18,000.

Dover has a total list of 1,478 stations, and serves a population of 15,661.

Buxton has 496 stations, serving a population of 6943. It can be said that with the increase in Portsmouth, every effort is made to add efficiency to the service on the part of the management has met with success, and it is predicted that the present quarters occupied by the company as a central exchange in a short time will be inadequate and the company will be obliged to enlarge in every department.

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRAIGHTEN YOU UP

If Costive, Headachy, Bilious, Stomach Sour, Breath Bad—Clean Your Liver and Bowels

Get a ten cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste, and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartics, pills, or castor oil.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a ten cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

Check the Symptoms of Lung Trouble

One of the many reasons why Lung Trouble is so difficult to fight is because the disease is often of a very latently nature. The patient may look well, but in reality is fast losing strength. He may feel night sweats, fever and cough. These symptoms should be checked as quickly as possible. Eckman's Alternative is powerful in checking fever and night sweats and it has brought about many complete recoveries. Read this case—

"Gentlemen: I am writing you this testimonial that others may know what your Alternative has done for me. Since I was a very young woman I was a sufferer from Bronchitis. I tried doctor after doctor, getting little or no benefit. Finally I had a severe attack of pneumonia and lost nearly all weight and my doctor told me if they were not checked I would have Lung Trouble. Miss Mary Kornham, who is a friend of mine, recovered after taking your Alternative and insisted that I try it. I am now, after two years, perfectly well, strong and healthy."

(Address: Mrs. Rosa Voelgel, 205 W. 11th St., New York City.)

Eckman's Alternative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Tracheitis, Asthma, Stomach Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet telling of results. For sale by all leading druggists and in Portsmouth by Benjamin Green.

ALWAYS AT YOUR SERVICE.

ent service in the Massachusetts General Hospital, which has just issued its one-hundredth Annual Report. It was the leader in New England in point of time, it has become in later years the leader in the number of the sick it serves.

Last year it cared for about 170,000 patients. Over 6000 of these were in the house wards, and nearly 5000 were in the accident wards. Nearly 150,000 cents for treatment were made upon it by its out-patients.

Among all the hospitals of the country it is a leader in many scientific advances, in surgery, in medicine, in medical social service, in adding patients handicapped by physical defects, and in the never ceasing of hospital management which makes the medical arts most serviceable to its patients. Besides the General Hospital in Boston, the Trustees also maintain, from contributed gifts and the income from bequests of earlier givers, the McLean Asylum for the Insane, among the beautiful hills of Waverley. There also is the Convalescent Hospital to which hundreds of patients are sent each year for the time to rest and recover after the hospital has done its direct remedial work for them.

Not a State Institution

The Hospital is not in any way a state institution, though it has the name "Massachusetts General." It is supported wholly by voluntary gifts, not at all by state funds. Its service is always open to the needy sick from all New England, and it receives many from outside the borders of these six states. Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont last year sent more than two hundred patients to the Massachusetts General, while smaller numbers came from Rhode Island and Connecticut. The chief and proudest of Massachusetts' charitable of Boston sent 3271 patients. These figures show how widespread its work is.

A Leader Among Hospitals

Copied by all the important hospitals of the country, the Massachusetts General's system of medical social service to out-patients was devised at the hospital about eight years ago. No hospital, even the newer ones for the insane, is now considered adequately organized until it has social workers to help patients get in their homes and at their work the conditions that health and safety demand.

Pioneer in another line, the Massachusetts General has started following a work for patients who have been in the hospital wards. The results of the treatment given in the hospital cannot be fully known unless the hospital has knowledge of its patients for a considerable time after they leave it. This system has already been organized for the surgical work, and is being extended to the children's department and other departments. Such follow-up work means that the hospital will know more fully than ever before whether it is getting the best possible results for its patients out of modern medical science. This greater and more accurate knowledge will continue to benefit the patient whose condition continues under scrutiny after he leaves the hospital, and all those later patients whose treatment may be made more scientific by this new study.

Occupational Diseases

So-called occupational diseases now have in the Massachusetts General almost a department to themselves, headed by one of the country's foremost experts in this line, Dr. David L. Edsall. During the past year lead poisoning in the trades has been studied under his direction with a thoroughness never before attempted anywhere. A special worker is engaged in following the condition of the patients after they leave the hospital. Nearly two hundred cases have been studied with great care. It is found that these sufferers from lead poisoning generally go back to work again conditions which will soon again make them victims of their former disease. This work, as it extends, is likely to have an important effect on legislation for the protection of workers against avoidable dangers from poisonous substances used in the trades.

A High Grade School for Nurses

Nursing, on which all good service in the sick depends, is taught by the Massachusetts General in its large training school for nurses, on the highest standards. The nursing course of three years, together with the measures taken to weed out needless and repulsive drudgery from the nurses' work, has attracted an increasingly better class of young women. A new Nurses' Home, of most approved plan and equipment, was built last year. It furnishes separate sleeping rooms for 160 nurses, besides quarters for some of the officers of the school, for a library, living room, abundant baths, and the equipment for health and comfort that is especially needed by nurses on active duty.

Giving Ether a Specialty

Etherizing of patients for operation, a process whose history dates from the famous first operation under ether which was done at the hospital on October 16, 1846, has become at the Massachusetts General almost a profession by itself. It should be called "etherizing" to be accurate, for other drugs than ether are used for special requirements; and the anesthetic, for spinal anesthesia, or other local use, is given by other means than inhaling. The physician who has special charge of the anesthetizing department has made a specialty of this work for many years, and is one of the leading American authorities on it.

Cooperative Service by Specialists

Cooperation in the diagnosing and treatment of sickness by the specialists of the hospital staff is a new thing to be practiced systematically in the hospitals. But in the Massachusetts General it has been developed to a high degree. This system belongs to hear on a single case more knowledge, more experience, and a greater fund of judgment than any one doctor could possibly have. The benefit to the patient is clear. It has come to be so highly rated that many prominent physicians in Boston would be glad if they could send some of their well-to-do patients to the hospital, instead of keeping them solely under their own care.

How the First Call Was Made

Dr. John Collins Warren (nephew of the Joseph Warren who fell at Bunker Hill) signed in 1810, with the famous Dr. James Jackson, the letter which set forth the need of the proposed Massachusetts General, and which really began the founding of the hospital. That letter, after detailing the proposed services to the poor which the hospital has since given so abundantly, ends with an appeal just as urgent now as it was then. These doctors asked:

"On what other objects can the superfluities of the rich be so well bestowed?"

VISITS THE PRESIDENT

Washington, March 23.—A pale, smiling lad of 32 lay on a stretcher in the Blue Room of the White House early today and beside him sat the President of the United States. The scene was the culmination of weeks of yearning and the kind response of President Wilson to the little boy's plea.

Paralyzed in limb, and his life slowly ebbing away, Harry Winthrop Davis of Sewickley, Penn., was the President's early caller. He came in a motor ambulance and three hospital attendants bore him into the White House, to the Blue Room. The President came and chatted for several minutes with the little fellow, whose eyes beamed with joy, and who was at first too happy to speak. Finally he asked about Mrs. Wilson and left some flowers for her.

The President's eyes were dimmed as he turned away to his day of work and the little boy was carried out to the ambulance and away to the railroad station, and on to Atlantic City. The visit was arranged after Mrs. A. L. Davis, the boy's mother, had written Mrs. Wilson telling how her little boy had been praying to see the President and how she earnestly hoped it might be arranged. She suggested that the little fellow could be brought to the White House, and the President promptly gave his consent.

NEW HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE NOTES

New Hampshire College, Durham, N. H., March 23.—The Glee club and the college mandolin club will handle together, N. H., about 40 strong and give a concert there at the Baptist church, March 27. The male quartet of the variety glee club will accompany them, and the music will be given under the direction of Dr. A. W. Richards. The trip to an especially interesting one to the students, as it is the first time an organization of girls has ever represented the college outside of Durham.

The members of the clubs will be entertained at the homes of the members of the Rochester church. Mrs. Shirley Underwood of Durham and Mrs. Guy Smith, wife of Professor Smith of the department of economics will accompany the party as chaperones.

Dr. E. H. Graves, of the department of sociology and psychology, will give a course in rural sociology at the state camp of the Young Men's Christian Association at Belknap this summer.

His discussion of rural sociology, Prof. Graves explains, will deal with country life as it is and as it might be. The subject will be considered as regards school, church and recreation and from every aspect but the economic.

Prof. Graves gave a similar series of lectures last year at the summer school of the Washington State college at Pullman, Wash.

JAPANESE DIET PROLOGUED; CABINET LIKELY TO RESIGN

Two Houses Unable to Agree on the Appropriations for the Navy and Deadlock Results.

Tokio, Japan, March 23.—The Japanese Diet was prorogued today by the emperor of Japan owing to the inability of the House of Peers and the House of Representatives to agree on the appropriations for the navy. The lower house had reduced the naval estimates by a considerable sum, and the House of Peers afterwards further diminished them, but this was not agreed to by the members of the House of Representatives, and a deadlock was brought about. In political circles it is generally believed that the cabinet will resign.
